In addition to pointing out these facts the bulletin already mentioned, The Sheep Killing Dog, discusses the present time the various state laws on this subject differ widely, some states using money obtained from dog licenses to reimburse sheep own-ers, while others permit the sheep men to recover damages from the dog owners and to offer them no recours whatsoever. Dogs, however, are very seldom caught in the act of killing sheep. It is always difficult to determine their owners, and where the damages are paid by the state directly from the dog-tax funds the money very frequently is far from sufficient to meet all the claims.

Under this plan all dogs over six months of age must be licensed each year, the tax paid at this time of licensing and a metal tag bearing the license number attached to the dog's collar. Any defound without this tag, unattended in the sufficient area can be fenced to give the flock protection during the killed. When found unattended on a farm where sheep are kept the dog form of time in driving the safely may be killed whether it has the tag or not, and under any circumstances a tain loss of time in driving the sheep or not, and under any circumstances a dog caught chasing or killing sheep may be killed. All dogs which can be proved to be sheep killers must be killed whether caught in the act or not, and a reward of $15 should be offered for any one identifying a sheep-killing dog. The money received from killing dog. The money received from dog taxes should be devoted to reimburse sheep owners for their lost stock and the county should in turn recover this money whenever possible recover this money whenever possible from the dogs' owners. A special license should be issued for kennels where large numbers of dogs are maintained under such conditions that they cannot possibly do any harm to neighboring flocks.

While some such plan as this is probably indispensable to the full dependence.

probably indispensable to the full de-velopment of the sheep industry in the velopment of the sheep industry in the United States, there are cases where the flock master will find in its absence the use of dog-proof fences very desirable. The grazing of sheep upon comparatively small areas of land sown to forage crops, instead of upon permanent pastures in larger fields permanent pastures in larger fields materially reduces the area to be fenced and makes this a practicable precaution. Posts 7½ feet in length, set 2½ feet in the ground and 16 feet apart; a barbed wire stretched flat to the surface of the ground; three inches higher a 36-inch woven-wire fence having a four-inch triangular mesh; five inches higher a barbed wire; six inches higher a second barbed wire; seven inches above this a third barb wire. Total height 57 inches.

It is important to remember, how-ever, that the bottom strand of barbed wire must be stretched flat on the sur face of the ground at all points. If necessary the ground sould be grad-ed before the fence is built. Thereafleft in uninclosed pastures through the day. This method involves a cer-tain loss of time in driving the sheep to and from the inclosure, but in many cases will be preferred to the expens of fencing on a large scale.

Mars! Thou cruel god, go hide thy For very shame withdraw forever-Hast thou a ghoulish gies in such dis-grace? Thy joy of war, O will it ne'er be Contendest thou the point that MIGHT is RIGHT?

If not, then why invoke grim war's decree?
Must petty difference be cause to fight And civil government forgotten be? O cruel monster! Of all gods the worst; Behold the murder strewn along thy path; Must man shed all his blood to quench thy thirst?

wisked wrath. Davise some means to settle thy disputes

Without the awful shock of war's alarms.
Such arbitration e'en disgraces brutes;
Mankind should never more resort to FAITH. hear the brooklet singing by With questions not that he shall find Beyond some hill, beneath some sky, A welcome home not yet divined.

On some far mountain journeying, But never doubt was in his song That rest should end his wandering. So of the brooklet's faith I take,
The faith of wind on distant quest
And down the years my way I make
In sure belief that way is best!
